OF WHAT USE CITIZENS' UNION?

GOOD GOVERNMENT CLUB NOT CLEAR ABOUT IT.

One of 'Em Says '95, When the Googoos Polled 1,600 Votes, Was the Ideal Campaign-Hinrichs Says That Traction and Lighting Companies Govern City.

Good Government Club C had a dinner last night at the Hotel St. Denis and discussed the subject "What Use Is the Citizens" Union?" There were ten speakers; there was no general agreement among them as to the real answer to their puzzle. One or two even suggested that the Citizens' Union was of no use, and that it was time to invent something new to play with. The Rev. Dr. Merle St. Croix Wright said that he looked upon the Citizens' Union as he looked once upon the ruins of an Athenian temple, full of admiration for the ideals which it represented.

It was apparent from the beginning that the hope of those who had arranged the dinner was that there would be a decided expression of hostility to any fusion of the Citizens' Union with those two wicked and lamentable institutions, the Democratic and Republican parties. Said Isaac H. Klein, the president:

"When the Citizens' Union came into the second Low campaign, John C. Sheehan was in his political tomb; Coffey was dead and gone, Benno Loewy had not been heard of for years. The Citizens' Union took them up and rehabilitated them and made them respectable. What could come out of such damnable alliances as these except what did come? Misgovernment. Now, we cannot make a deal with Grocerman Ben or any of the tribe that he stands for we hope for a success in convincing the community of the purity of the motives of the Citizens' Union."

Mr. Klein said a lot more things of the same sort.

J. J. Murphy said that the question of the evening might look like an effect to get an answer to the question: "Vas is les mit der Citizens' Union?" The real purport of the meeting was much more important. It was to ascertain the opinion of Good Government Club C on the possibilities for good in what Mr. Murphy called "a modified ticket," which was taken to be the same thing as the combination of circumstances formerly known as a "fusion ticket."

E. V. Abbott exalted the Goo Goo ticket of 1896 as the only real ideal ticket this city had ever seen. The Strong and Low administrations were failures, he said, because of the inefficiency of the members who were elected under the exigencies of fusion.

Julius Henry Cohen, the chairman of the Citizen's Union committee on legislation at Albany, was somewhat excited by the prevailing idealistic tendency of the speakers. He said, among other things:

"Speaking for the legislation committee's ideals, I want to say that our idea of the purpose of the Citizens' Union is that it is educational. We do not go up to Albany to kill grab bills; that is incidental to the rusted with the people's interests."

Mr. Cohen announced that the committee had not been looking for notoriety—that it had been working for results and that how great results it had accomplished would not become apparent until the Citizens' Union went into the Assembly districts in the coming campaign with the records of the candidates for Assembly on the grab bills.

records of the candidates for Assembly on the grab bills.

He said that the Cits would support Tammany men who had been "straight" on grab bills just as gladly as it would support Republicans or Citizens' Union men. Citizens' Union warfare, he said, was gue rilla warfare against dishonesty in public office, and aid must be accepted wherever it could be found.

Good gracious!" he shouted in conclusion.

cyrus L. Sulzberger was for pure idealism, which would win in spite of continual defeats.

F. W. Hinrichs talked idealism, too, for the allotted time, and then asked how much ore time he had.

One minute, "said the chairman.

"Then I want to say this, "said Mr. Hinrichs. "The government of this city is three or four traction companies and a gas and electric light company fostered and protected by the two so-called political parties.—"

Give him another minute," shouted Julius Henry Cohen amid wild applause.
Mr. Hinrichs went on to say that the reason, in his best judgment, why a Republican Legislature extended the Mayor's term to four years was that the "plunderers' realized that the socialitic idea of public ownership of franchises was on its way

MARRIAGE BY RABBI INVALID In Austria and Therefore Here-Many Such Cases, Lawyer Says.

According to Lawyer Leon Korpinsky representing the Austrian Consul to New York, 80 per cent. of the Hebrew marriages performed in Austria and some other European countries are illegal. He made this statement vesterday in the Essex Market police court when Samuel Schlosser of 106 Ridge street was charged with abandonment and non-support by his wife Peppi.

The woman declared that she married Schlosser five years ago in Austria and that he deserted her two years ago in Manchester, England. She arrived in this country six tion shall have been relegated to the proper weeks ago and pretty soon found the Essex Market police court and got a warrant for Market police court and got a warrant for Schlosser. He was located Monday night. Rosey the lawyer was counsel for Schlosser. The woman admitted that the marriage was performed by a rabbi and that no other ceremony had taken place. Rosey called Korpinsky, who had several law books with him, and who explained to Magistrate Barlow that a rabbinical marriage is not legal in Austria unless there is also a civil marriage. Most of the Jewish marriages performed there, he said, were valid only according to the law of Moses.

The Magistrate decided that Schlosser could not be held, as the law provides that to uphold a marriage in this State it must be shown that the man and woman were married legally in the country or State they came from.

In an abandonment case before Magistrate Barlow on Sunday, Rosey raised a similar point, but was overruled. He took an appeal to the Court of General

The child's mother, Mrs. Jennie Kaniewski, child's mother, Mrs. Jennie Kaniewski, has been employed for the past four months as a nurse by Dr. and Mrs. Solomon Neumann of 58 Séventh street. Mrs. Goldman was engaged to care for the child. On fair Sundays Mrs. Goldman brought the child to its mother. Sunday being rainy she did not take it out, but called to get her pay and reported the infant in good health. Late the following afternoon she brought word that the child was dead. Coroner Goldenkranz inclines to the belief that the child died of meningitis. An autopsy will be held to-day.

JAPAN'S DEMANDS WILL GROW

EX-PREMIER OKUMA SAYS TERMS WILL CHANGE AS WAR GOES ON.

Must Become the Arbiter of Peace in the Far East-Anger in Japan at the Second Visit of the Russian Fleet to Hongkohe Bay-Activity on the Corean Border.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN Paris, May 16 .- A despatch to the Matin from Tokio says that the news that the Russian fleet had returned to Honkohe Bay was received with astonishment by the

The Tokio correspondent of the Journal says that in an interview Okuma, former Premier of Japan, said the presence of the Russian squadrons in the bays of Indo-China had created a very disquieting situation and that only the happy memories of the former cordial relations of France and Japan had made the Japanese able to remain comparatively calm. Japan was most anxious not to make the situation more acute. but it was urgently necessary that France should take up a clearly defined position, otherwise the tide of popular feeling would become irresistible.

After dwelling upon the excitement prevailing among the Japanese people against France, Okuma took up the consideration of the possible chances of peace. He said he thought that Japan's claims ought to increase in magnitude in proportion to the duration of the war. He said:

"Japan will reject any proposal at all like a truce. Japan must become the arbiter of peace in the Far East. She will not be satisfied with the control of Corea and the possession of the Liaotung Peninsula and Sakhalin Island. It will be necesary, should Vladivostok continue to belong to Russia, that it should be a purely commercial port. Japan will carry on the struggle until all her aims have been secured and she will never yield. When Russian dominalimits, Japan will become the sincere friend of Russia.

Tokio, May 16 .- The Kokumin, in an article on the situation created by France's violations of neutrality, sounds a warning note to the Japanese nation. It declares that Japan's sole object in entering upon hostilities was to establish a lasting and honorable peace in the Far East. Should the war be extended so as to involve other nations Japan would be compelled to submit to a post-bellum international conference, which would greatly impede the realization of her aspirations. The article was evidently prompted by the earnest agitation that is being carried on by the press and the political parties, by means of petitions, urging the Government to take prompt and strong action against France.

LONDON, May 17.—The Tokio correspondent of the Telegraph says it is conclusively proved that the Baltic fleet was still anchored at Honkohe Bay on May 16.

The Telegraph emphasizes the above

GREAT MEETING TO HELP ALONG THE TENT MOVEMENT.

Pletures to Show the Evils of This City -Bishop Greer Presides at Interdenominational Meeting-F. B. Meyer, Who Worked in Wales, Speaks.

As a preliminary to the great summer revival movement of the Prot stant Churches, which is to start with a meeting on the steps of the City Hall at noon on Monday. a big meeting was held at Carnegie Hall last night under the auspices of the interdenominational committee.

A feature of the revival will be the erection of great tents in different parts of the city, particularly the poorer quarters. These tents will cost $30,000 to maintain, and one of the purposes of last night's meeting was to make an appeal for funds. Already $15,000 has been raised, not including a check from John D. Rockefeller for $1,000 and several other generous sums received yesterday.

The stereopticon played a great part at the meeting to show "the problem of the Bishop David H. Greer, who pre sided, said that the most enlightened of cities was often most ignorant of itself.

"The churches, rising above and ignoring their differences, are going to preach the Gospel to the city," he said. "It is not a sensational movement aiming at sensational results, but a Christian movement to acresults, but a Christian movement to accomplish encouraging moral results. That there is any moral epidemic here I do not believe, but we have our own peculiar moral problems to solve, and every Christian should be interested in their solution."

Dr. Walter Laidlaw of the Federation of Churches, with the aid of charts and pictures on the screen then showed what the problem was. The Protestants numbered, he said, only 8½ per cent. of New York's population, and in five Assembly districts the percentage was less than in the island of Ceylon.

Schauffler showed scenes in the crowded tenement house districts and the interesting picture of the interior of a black and tan joint in Thompson street, "which," said he, "represents a degradation worse than can be found in Africa." Dr. Schauffler said there were thousands of people in the slums waiting to be reached. Pictures shown by J. B. Ely, who is to superintend the tent campaign, were of the tents in Philadelphia last summer and of meetings that were held in the parks of that city. Dr. W. They are the picked instruments of the sale and include some which have never left our warerooms, being used only for demonstration purposes. For persons who are willing to forego the advantages of the Metrostyle, they represent an exceptional opportunity. Our own salesmen could not distinguish them from absolutely new Pianolas. Yet the same down payment as in Group II. will give immediate possession.

MISCELLANEOUS PIANO PLAYERS-$75 to $125 Monthly payments to suit purchaser

For the first time in its business experience the Aeolian Company offers a miscellaneous collection of piano players including practically all makes. Naturally, no guarantee can be given with these instruments beyond that they are in perfect playing order when sold. Yet we agree to take them back at their full purchase price in exchange for Metrostyla Pianolas at any time within three months.

Sternberger was the first witness in his own defense. He testified that he had not lived with his wife since 1895, and that in 1902 he met Mrs. Menendez and her hushand. They became intimate socially, he said, and when Menendez went back to Cuba, leaving his wife here for her health, he asked Sternberger to look after Mrs. Menendez. Sternberger categorically denied that he had ever been in Mrs. Menendez's bedroom except two seasons. dez's bedroom, except on two occasions when she was very ill and had sent for him. COLER WOULD BUILD FLATS. Meant to Build a Residence, but Heard Mrs. Simis Was to Build Flats.

Bird S. Coler put an advertisement in the newspapers yesterday asking for some one to build a row of flats on the property at New York avenue and Prospect place which he had purchased in 1903 with the avowed intention of erecting upon it a residence. His advertisement caused complace which he had purchased in 1963 with the avowed intention of erecting upon it a residence. His advertisement caused comment in the vicinity, which is built up with handsome detached residences.

Mr. Coler said last night that he had determined to build flats on the property because he had learned that Mrs. Emma Vail Simis, a next door neighbor, had decided to build a row of flats on the property adjoining, and as he did not care to live next to a row of flats the property would be of little use to him except as an investment. He said he had fully intended to build a home on the property, but under the circumstances he could not.

Mrs. Simis could not be seen last night, but a member of the family declared that the rumor that she was about to build flats on her property was a mistake. It was said that her property was for sale, but that there was no intention to erect the objectionable flats.

Wage Increase Without Strikes.

standing between Court and counsel arose yesterday at the trial of Mrs. Birdie Sternberger's suit for a divorce from Louis Sternberger, broker, in which Mrs. Lillian V. Menendez, wife of a Cuban sugar planter, who died before the action was begun, was named by the plaintiff.

Sternberger denied all the charges of misconduct and testified that Menendez, had asked him to look after Mrs. Menendez, who was ill of consumption, in the spring and summer of 1903.

Delancey Nicoll, Mrs. Sternberger's counsel, asked some questions with a view to attacking Sternberger's credibility.

These were not allowed, and then Mr. Nicoll handed up to Supreme Court Justice Clarke a paper containing a number of typewritten questions. He explained that he wished to have the Court pass on the admissibility of the questions. Justice Clarke would not allow them. Mr. Nicoll then asked that the questions be considered as having been put and not allowed.
